

INVITATION TO BREAST CANCER AWARENESS OPEN EVENING

The Organic Pharmacy would like you to join us for an informative evening to discuss why more and more of us are getting breast cancer. The evening will investigate the link between environmental toxins and breast cancer, presented by three inspiring women:

Deborah Burton

Founder member of No More Breast Cancer, became involved with breast cancer campaigning in the late 1990s through the successful campaign to ban the chemical Lindane, linked to breast cancer.

Elizabeth Salter Green

Director of CHEM Trust, previously worked for WWF where she was the director of WWF-UK Toxics programme, and has many years of experience in the field of chemicals, health and environmental issues.

Helen Lynn

Director of Wildcard Research and Communications, previously worked in the Women's Environmental Network for 12 years. While there she instigated the campaigns on breast cancer and cosmetics.

The Organic Pharmacy is the first and only pharmacy in the world that is dedicated to health and beauty using organic products and treatments. Fully registered with The Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, we choose to specialise only in herbs, homeopathy and organic skincare. Free from carcinogens and toxins that are commonly found in everyday cosmetics and toiletries.

No More Breast Cancer Campaign argues that we need to face up to the fact of environmental pollution with regard to breast cancer. Policy-makers need to acknowledge that lifelong, low-level exposure to a toxic cocktail of carcinogens and hormone disrupters in the home, workplace and environment may be linked to rising levels of the disease. This campaign aims to inform women that, while they need ever more improved methods of detection, breast cancer can be viewed as a preventable and not an inevitable disease.
